

100 Niche Family Mediation Content Topics

A practical UK content bank built around the specific children and financial disputes people raise when relationships end.

COLLEAGUE BRIEFING | SEPTEMBER 2026

Executive summary

The strongest long-tail content opportunities are not broad explanations of family mediation. They are the exact practical questions people face during separation: who holds a passport, how shifts affect a parenting rota, who pays travel costs after relocation, or how inherited money used on a mortgage is treated.

100	10	2
niche subjects	content clusters	core needs: children and finances

Why these topics matter

- They match the language and circumstances used by people in active disputes, improving relevance and long-tail search intent.
- They allow each mediation brand to demonstrate practical understanding without duplicating another generic 'what is mediation?' page.
- Many naturally connect to a clear next step: a mediation assessment meeting, parenting discussion or financial disclosure process.
- The clusters create strong internal-linking opportunities to core children, finance, MIAM and location pages.

Recommended editorial principle

Write for the argument the reader is having today - then explain where mediation may help, its limits, and when independent legal advice is appropriate.

How to turn topics into useful pages

Use the reader's problem as the title

Avoid broad wording	Use specific, search-led wording
Child Arrangements and Relocation	My Ex Wants to Move Away With Our Children - Can Family Mediation Help?
Financial Mediation and Inheritance	I Used My Inheritance to Pay Off Our Mortgage - What Happens When We Separate?

Suggested page structure

- 1 Open with the specific situation and acknowledge why it creates uncertainty or conflict.
- 2 Explain the practical points the parties may need to discuss, using neutral language.
- 3 Describe how a mediator can structure the conversation without promising an outcome.
- 4 Clarify what mediation cannot decide and where legal, pension, tax, mortgage or safeguarding advice may be needed.
- 5 Answer five to eight tightly related FAQs and link to the relevant core service and location pages.
- 6 End with a proportionate invitation to arrange an initial mediation assessment meeting.

Editorial and compliance guardrails

- Do not present mediation content as personalised legal advice or imply a guaranteed agreement or court outcome.
- Avoid stating that one parent or partner is automatically entitled to a particular result; circumstances differ.
- Use England and Wales terminology only where accurate, and review jurisdiction-specific statements before publishing elsewhere.
- Include appropriate signposting for domestic abuse, coercive control, child-safety concerns and urgent legal protection.
- Have legally sensitive pages reviewed and dated; update them when law, procedure or official guidance changes.
- Keep each page substantially distinct. Do not mass-produce near-identical versions across brands or locations.

Recommended production plan

Start with 20 high-intent pages rather than publishing all 100 at once. Measure impressions, engagement, enquiries and internal-link performance before expanding each cluster.

Priority	Topic groups	Reason
1	Relocation; family home; inheritance	Urgent, high-stakes situations with clear mediation relevance
2	50/50 routines; schools; holidays	Recurring practical disputes with strong question-based intent
3	Pensions; debt; self-employment	Complex financial issues that benefit from structured explanation
4	New partners; grandparents; pets	Useful differentiation and strong supporting internal-link content

Additional ultra-specific opportunities

A second layer of content can be developed around birthdays, Mother's Day and Father's Day, children's phones and messaging, clubs, haircuts, medical appointments, pocket money, first cars, university costs, weddings, possessions moving between homes, missed handovers, lateness, childcare by new partners, grandparent pick-ups and pets travelling between homes.

These should be commissioned only where the site can add a genuinely useful, distinct answer and connect it to an appropriate mediation pathway.

Discussion sources

The topic bank was informed by public UK discussion threads in which people described specific separation, child-arrangement and financial concerns. These are examples of language and situations in the market, not legal authorities or representative research samples.

1. Temporary school-holiday and overseas arrangements
 2. Relocation where an existing child-arrangements order applies
 3. Children relocating after separation
 4. Relocation, children and a proposed move
 5. Family-home affordability and sale concerns
 6. Inheritance used to reduce a matrimonial mortgage
 7. Pensions and financial settlement discussion
 8. Spending and making a fair financial offer
